

Presse Release
Paris, September 11, 2020

Eglé de Richemont was nominated Managing Director of AmCham France on September 1st 2020

After studies in law, European Relations and Lobbying, Eglé spent seven years with a Paris firm specialized in strategic intelligence, public affairs and lobbying. During this time, she developed a specialization in advising CEOs in their first months of leadership. She then joined global mobility leader Transdev. There, Eglé led a number of key restructuring initiatives, including the combination of head offices and streamlining of the group's support functions and organization. She also served as Secretary of the Executive Committee and Head of Investor Relations. Eglé later joined another large group to spearhead two major organizational transformation initiatives before pursuing an entrepreneurial project.

Eglé further brings a Franco-American background. Her experience with both policy issues and real-world implementation, alongside her knowledge of the CEO and Board environments in France provides unique insight into the goals and challenges faced by AmCham member companies, allowing greater interaction with current members and supporting stronger development opportunities. This experience also will allow AmCham to continue to engage with our government partners around the investment climate in France and an ambitious agenda focused on responsible growth, innovation, and job creation.

We are convinced that her business and policy orientation combined with the support of the AmCham team, will allow our organization to be a key resource for our members as we navigate the post-pandemic period and beyond.

Eglé de Richemont, Managing Director, AmCham France: « I will put all my energy alongside my team, at the service of the companies that trust us, in order to best help them in navigate the current crisis. Thanks to its network, its partners and the privileged relationship that AmCham holds with the public sphere, I am convinced that our association will continue to play a key role in the public debate in France. More generally, AmCham will continue to strengthen transatlantic relations, while carrying the voice of its members. »

Bijan Eghbal, Partner DLA Piper, President AmCham France: « I look forward to working closely with Eglé de Richemont. Her high-level experience in large French companies, and her personal American background will greatly contribute to AmCham's projects aimed at promoting transatlantic relations and the interaction between our members. »

About AmCham France:

AmCham represents companies committed to the transatlantic relationship. Founded in 1894 to promote economic exchanges between France and the United States, AmCham now brings together 250 French, American and European companies of all sizes and from all sectors of the economy. Independent of any government, AmCham helps bring new ideas to the public debate, especially to strengthen France's attractiveness.

In this perspective, AmCham includes numerous working groups that develop recommendations in the form of white papers and policy papers. As a platform for high-level meetings, AmCham regularly brings together business leaders, political leaders, and academic leaders. These meetings give rise to in-depth debates and exchanges on economic, social, and geopolitical issues relating to the evolution of the transatlantic relationship. AmCham is committed to societal issues that are at the heart of its members' activities. Thus, AmCham conducts various projects around diversity, inclusion but also innovation.
